E-commerce

Retail: an eminently cultural phenomenon

- There is a significant disparity between the various markets (size, hypermarkets, etc.)
- This is particularly true for e-commerce

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Share of e-commerce in retail sales</th>

<tbody>

Customer as judge

- The image of pure players is fading, in favour of omni-channel and/or innovative brands that offer a better price/quality balance Décahlon, Cultura, Picard and FNAC (OC&C study - January 2018)
- Click&Collect market share doubled between 2010 and 2017 = 40% of online sales

Omni-channel convergence

- Increasingly omni-channel customers
- Two formats unite without contradicting each other (Spartoo buying André, Google partners with Walmart, Carrefour going into partnership with Tencent, etc.)
- 70% of consumers visit in-store before buying online and 92% do online research before making an in-store purchase
- 38% of purchases of cultural goods are made online; however FNAC and Cultura continue to successfully develop their physical networks
Solid results in a changing environment (2/3)

Shopping centres adjoining a food anchor

Dominance of intercommunity shopping centres

✓ Over the past few years, intercommunity shopping centres have outperformed other types of centre (Source: CNCC):

- 2010-2017 growth in revenue of intercommunity shopping centres: +30 bps vs. regional shopping centres
- 2010-2017 growth in revenue of intercommunity shopping centres +100 bps vs. town centre shopping centres

✓ Leadership in the catchment area is key

Resilience of hypermarkets (HM)

✓ After 3 sluggish years (2014: -2.3%, 2015: +0.3%, 2016: -0.1%), hypermarket sales in France are starting to look up* (2017: +0.7%, 2018(e): +1.0%)

✓ Hypermarket operators are focusing their expertise on key trends: organic, local produce, etc.

✓ The number of HM continues to grow (1,944 HM in 2012, 2,208 HM in 2017)

Solid results in a changing environment

Strong resilience to interest rate hikes

- Risk premiums at their highest level. Correlation with macroeconomic risk. Improved macro = decreased risk premium
- Long-term debt (79% on fixed or swap rates for Carmila): financial expenses not sensitive to a moderate rate increase
- Rents indexed to inflation
Today more so than yesterday, retail is a value-creating industry that requires highly-skilled professionals.

Using the skills of specialised teams to address changes in the sector

The shopping centre industry: a niche business (jumbos, centres anchored by hypermarkets, retail parks, etc.) requiring specialist teams

Developing local leadership at each centre enables us to create value on assets of all sizes

Supporting the convergence with online shopping means adapting to a omni-channel approach, mastering and utilising pure player solutions to accompany our tenants through this change
